Attendo terminates home care agreement with the City of Gothenburg, Sweden

Attendo is terminating its home care agreement with the City of Gothenburg. Attendo will continue to provide home care services to care recipients as usual throughout the three-month notice period and is working closely with the city to ensure a safe and smooth transition to a new provider.

Attendo reviews its agreements regularly to ensure that all operations have terms and conditions that are long-term sustainable. These terms, which among other things include compensation, provide the basis for Attendo to offer high-quality care that puts care recipients' quality of life at the centre. Following several years of dialogue with the City of Gothenburg, it is now clear that the terms for providing home care services are no longer long- term sustainable.

"The City of Gothenburg's unwillingness to create sustainable terms for its providers undermines the quality of care and the elderlies ability to shape their own lives, which is truly regrettable. We are proud of the fantastic work our employees do every day, and have done over the past four years, to provide home care that people can rely on. Our focus going forward is contributing to a safe and smooth transition and supporting our employees throughout the process," says Camilla Henneryd, Acting Head of Home Care Segment, Attendo.

Attendo has operated a small-scale home care service in the City of Gothenburg since 2021. The decision to terminate the agreement affects approximately 30 full-time employees and 160 care recipients. Attendo's other operations in the City of Gothenburg, including nursing homes, are not affected by the decision, and the decision has no material impact on Attendo's financial results.
