

Clavister Signs SEK 23 million Cyber Security Contract with IWG

Örnsköldsvik, Sweden, July 03, 2023. Clavister, a leader in European cybersecurity for mission-critical applications, today announced a SEK 23 million extension contract with International Workplace Group (IWG).

IWG is a global leader in hybrid working and provides flexible workplace to more than 8 million people across six continents to work more productively. Some of the big companies like Microsoft, HSBC, Disney and Samsung are amongst their customers.

Clavister has been a trusted cyber security partner for IWG since several years, providing security solutions and support services to secure IWG's highly integrated networks across its 4,000+ locations. Clavister's network security solutions for distributed offices addresses the needs for customers like IWG to give secure connectivity and collaborative working across its entire customer base, scaling up or down as per the requirements. Adequately protecting hybrid workers calls for reliable, multi-layered protection that includes technology to identify the threat posed by zero-day attacks.

The new three years frame agreement will include annual contract orders running to a minimum of SEK 23 million. This extension is testament of continued trust IWG puts in Clavister as a result of security assurance and superior customer service.

"I am happy to maintain our relationship with such a highly valued client", states Clavister CEO, John Vestberg. "IWG is the leader in flexible working and with such a distributed and demanding environment, network security and network traffic analysis are paramount to cyber security. We are proud to have been working with IWG as a long-term partner and secure their networks. They trust us and we make sure that they benefit from our latest technological innovations and product features."
