Soltech company Takorama in solar energy and roof project for housing association with an order value of SEK 8.3 million

Takorama is one of Soltech's roofing companies which, through the group's transformation strategy, now also offers solar energy solutions in combination with the core competence. The company has received an assignment from the housing association HSB Uppegård in Stenungsund. The assignment involves both a new roof and a roof-mounted solar cell installation, and the order value for the deal amounts to SEK 8.3 million.

The Ljungskile-based roofing company Takorama has a solid industrial experience and when the company was acquired by the Soltech group in 2020, work began to add solar energy to the existing product and service range. Since the transformation into a solar roof company, the company has carried out a number of solar energy installations and also has its own solar energy department.

Takorama has received a new assignment that includes both roof replacement with Derbigum and solar cells. It is a housing association in Stenungsund that will get a new roof and also a roof-mounted solar energy installed. CEO Michael Norrby is very positive about the project and that Takorama's solar energy department has grown during the summer with several new solar experts employed.

– We are very happy about the trust from HSB Uppegård. The fact that we can offer both roofing and solar energy creates a competitive overall solution that our customers appreciate. I also want to take the opportunity to welcome Isabelle, Alan and Pierre to our solar department and this will be a perfect project for them to carry out together with our experienced roofing department, says Michael Norrby, CEO of Takorama.
