JUMP GATE'S GAME GRAND PRIX OF EUROPE IS READY FOR RELEASE IN LATE JULY 2025

The Steam, Xbox and Play Station versions of Tivola Games' upcoming kart racing game Grand Prix of Europe have been approved by the platform owners and are ready to be released in connection with the movie premiere on July 24, 2025.

The game is developed by Jumpgate studio Tivola Games under a license agreement with Mack One (part of the Europa-Park family of companies). The game is based on the upcoming movie Grand Prix of Europe, which is an animated film based on characters from the Europa-Park. The movie will be released in the summer of 2025 in connection with the Europa-Park 50-year anniversary and is distributed in key territories by Warner Bros with a substantial marketing budget.

The Europa-Park is the second largest amusement park in Europe and the game will be distributed by the park as well as in the common retail and digital distribution channels. The revenue is shared among Mack One, Jumpgate and the external finance partners.

"We are very excited that the game is finished, approved by the platform owners and ready for release. We expect our submission for Switch to be approved any day now and are in the process of signing a distribution agreement with a reputable publisher for the retail sales outside the park. The release is an important milestone for us with significant upside for Jumpgate and revenue from the first copy sold. We see great potential in the game and expect this to be a solid revenue stream over the coming years, especially given the unique distribution power of the park", says Harald Riegler, CEO Jumpgate AB.
