

ENVAR PUBLISHING ANNOUNCES ITS FIRST SIGNED GAME

Earlier this summer, Envar announced the launch of a new venture, Envar Publishing. Today, Envar Publishing is proud to reveal it has officially signed its first game.

Since May this year, Envar Publishing has received over hundred pitches for different game projects, and has today entered a partnership with the new Spanish studio, Two Weeks at Home to develop a yet unannounced game.

"There is an incredible amount of talent within the indie scene, and we've received plenty of pitches to review. What we can say about Project Poseidon is that it's an indie game in the Adventure/Roguelite genres. Beyond that, it's too early to share more, but the team at Two Weeks at Home has thoroughly impressed us." says Liam O'Neill, Head of Games at Envar.

Envar chose to selfpublish its internally developed game Witchspire, which was released under both Envar Games and Envar Publishing.

"Our goal is to become one of the very best publishers for both indie and AA titles, and we see this as the beginning of a very exciting journey" Liam O'Neill continues. " We intend to sign at least one more game during 2026."
