

Norwegian company Nosyko AS joins XPartners

XPartners is strengthening its presence in Norway and welcomes Nosyko AS to the group. Nosyko is a well-established Norwegian advisor for complex building and equipment projects within healthcare, education and research.

Founded in 1970, the company has approximately 40 employees and is based in Oslo. Nosyko combines building and equipment planning with user and operational perspectives. The focus on workflows, functional requirements and operational needs ensures integrated deliveries from early stages through to procurement. Nosyko complements XPartners' companies and strengthens the group's position in a stable and important segment. In the most recent financial year, the company generated approximately NOK 93 million in revenue.

"We are very pleased to welcome Nosyko to XPartners. Their expertise in planning, project management and procurement naturally complements our technical disciplines. Together, we can deliver more integrated solutions in complex hospital, campus and research projects and continue our growth journey in Norway," says Sonny Mirborn, CEO of XPartners Group.

Nosyko's client base consists mainly of public-sector clients such as regional health authorities, university hospitals and research institutions. Projects are characterised by long cycles, stable demand and low sensitivity to economic fluctuations.

"We look forward to close collaboration with other specialists within XPartners while continuing to develop Nosyko on our own terms. With the strength of the collective, we become an even stronger and more complete partner that benefits both clients and collaborators," says Tonje Bay-Eriksson, CEO of Nosyko.

"We are very pleased that Nosyko is now part of XPartners. This strengthens our opportunities for continued growth in the Nordic market and provides us with a broad network of expertise to collaborate with in future projects," says Rolf C. Jerving, former Chairman of the Board and part of Nosyko for more than 30 years.
