

Flerie's portfolio company Empros Pharma reports study results positioning EMP16 as a promising oral weight-loss maintenance therapy

Flerie AB's (publ) portfolio company Empros Pharma has announced data from its dose-escalation study, POEM, showing improved tolerability in patients taking EMP16 with dietary support. Along with the strong efficacy results from their Phase 2 program, these tolerability findings position EMP16 as a promising therapy for weight-loss maintenance.

"The treatment of obesity and overweight is undergoing a transformation, and it's increasingly clear that we need a broad range of medications and therapies to help people not only lose weight, but most importantly, maintain their ideal weight long-term. We are very pleased that the POEM study results confirm EMP16's potential as a long-term treatment and look forward to the continued progress and development," says Mark Quick, Partner at Flerie.
