

Enersize launches new website – marking a clearer step in the company's growth journey

The new Enersize website is now live. The launch marks another step in the company's ongoing growth and increasing market activity, reflecting Enersize's transition toward a broader offering within industrial energy efficiency – with a focus on compressed air optimization, leakage detection, and the analysis and monitoring of other media.

"A lot is happening right now. We are seeing a strong increase in customer inquiries and discussions, both within our core area of compressed air and related energy carriers. The new website makes it easier for both industrial clients and investors to understand how we create value – through the optimization of existing systems and by developing new opportunities," says Fredrik Arrigucci, CEO of Enersize.

The launch comes at a time of high activity within the company. As previously communicated, the board and management are pursuing a long-term strategic plan aimed at accelerating growth through targeted acquisitions. The strategy is designed to strengthen Enersize's market position, broaden its offering, and highlight the underlying value that is not yet fully reflected in the current share price.

"This is a very exciting phase for Enersize. We are seeing growing interest in our solutions, while steadily executing on our growth strategy. The combination of organic expansion and strategic initiatives gives us the strength to create long-term shareholder value," Arrigucci continues.

The new website serves as a clearer platform to showcase Enersize's technology, business model, and vision – for both industrial partners and the capital market.
