

General Dynamics European Land Systems and Clavister demonstrate AI-powered cybersecurity at FEINDEF 2025

Örnsköldsvik, Sweden – May 14, 2025 – At FEINDEF 2023 General Dynamics European Land Systems (GDELS) and Clavister announced a technology partnership to further enhance GDELS' cybersecure, digital vehicle architecture. At this year's FEINDEF Clavister and GDELS are jointly demonstrating how Clavister's AI-powered CyberArmour can enhance the cyber protection during operations performed by GDELS systems.

"We have been working close together with Clavister over the last couple of years. This collaboration is contributing to offer additional functionalities to our electronic vehicle architecture NEVA where cybersecurity is a very important part", said Jose Lineros, Vice President Engineering of GDELS.

Stefan Brodin, Head of Defence at Clavister said, "We very much appreciate the collaboration with General Dynamics European Land Systems. We are happy to have continued trust and a well working partnership where we now develop and test technology hands-on, in real vehicles."
