XVIVO strengthens its executive management team by appointing Lena Hagman to Chief Operating Officer, COO

XVIVO continues to build and strengthen the company. XVIVO has a firm strategy plan for the coming five years, and as part of securing the company's global market leading position Lena Hagman has been appointed COO.

Lena Hagman has an extensive global operational experience within the medical device industry, and has for the last 12 years been in different executive roles within the Getinge group - a Swedish global MedTech company. Her most recent role was as Executive Vice President for Quality compliance, Regulatory and Medical Affairs, which she held for 7 years.

Throughout her career she has been active in the medical device industry, with more than 20 years in leading positions with global responsibilities in R&D, supply chain and quality/regulatory/medical affairs. Over the years Lena has been leading many strategic and efficiency programs and company integrations. With her deep knowledge and experience in different global medical device quality regulations and with a high customer and patient centricity focus she will be a great contribution to the XVIVO executive management team.

She holds a B.Sc. in Chemistry and Textile Engineering from Chalmers University of Technology, Sweden. Lena will be based at the headquarters in Gothenburg and will commence the role on December 1, 2022.

"I am very pleased that we have recruited a highly qualified COO to lead the development of the Operations function. By having Lena on board, with her extensive experience from various leadership roles, will not just strengthen the management team but also create a robustness in XVIVO's continued growth journey" says Christoffer Rosenblad, Acting CEO of XVIVO.
