Gints Ozoliņš steps down as Head of Technology at INDEXO Group, with Krišjānis Bērzs and Mareks Rudovičs taking over his responsibilities

Effective 20 November 2026, Gints Ozoliņš will step down as Head of Technology at the INDEXO financial services group and will also leave his positions as a member of the Management Board of AS INDEXO Banka and AS INDEXO Atklātais Pensiju Fonds. Going forward, the technological development of INDEXO Group will be jointly led by Mareks Rudovičs and Krišjānis Bērzs, who joined the Group in October this year.

Gints Ozoliņš has been part of the INDEXO team since the early stages of the establishment of INDEXO Bank, making a significant contribution to building the Bank's technology infrastructure, developing its information systems and launching the Bank's operations.

"I would like to thank Gints for his contribution to the establishment and development of INDEXO Bank. Gints has been with us since the Bank's first day, helping to build it and contributing to one of the most ambitious projects in Latvia's financial sector, the establishment of a new locally owned bank. We are grateful for everything we have accomplished together and wish Gints every success in his future professional endeavours. At the same time, INDEXO Group continues to grow and develop, attracting new talent and expertise. The addition of Mareks Rudovičs and Krišjānis Bērzs to our management team will strengthen our technology development capabilities and enable us to continue working on new, innovative financial services," says Valdis Siksnis, co-founder of INDEXO Group and Chairman of the Management Board of INDEXO Bank.

Mareks Rudovičs and Krišjānis Bērzs are co-founders of the Latvian technology company Roibox and have extensive experience in IT and technology management, data analytics, financial technology (FinTech), business process automation and the development of artificial intelligence solutions. Roibox, which specialises in data-driven digital marketing and business optimisation solutions, was acquired in 2026 by Jakala, an international Italian technology and marketing company.

Krišjānis Bērzs specialises in data architecture, data management and business intelligence solutions, including the management of IT infrastructure and technology solution development. Mareks Rudovičs' professional experience, in turn, covers data analytics, credit risk modelling and the automation of data-driven business processes. In recent years, both have also focused particularly on the development and implementation of artificial intelligence solutions and autonomous workflows.

Both new technology leaders joined INDEXO Group in October 2026 and will jointly be responsible for the Group's technological development going forward, supporting the continued growth of INDEXO Banka and other Group companies.

Companies closely associated with Mareks Rudovičs and Krišjānis Bērzs each acquired 160,000 new INDEXO shares in the private placement of 10 November 2026 at a price of EUR 2.50 per share.
