
Freemelt focuses on strong expansion – two managers with new roles

Nasdaq First North Growth Market-listed Freemelt has appointed Ulf Hansson, formerly working with system sales at Freemelt, to new Systems Development Manager. Ulf Hansson, with a previous background as R&D manager within Ericsson Microwave Systems, now takes over the responsibility for systems development from Per Woxenius, who assumes a new role as Product Manager with the responsibility for product strategies. Both will be part of Freemelt's management team.

Behind the change is Freemelt's focus on market- and sales-driven product development of 3D-printing technology as the company continues to grow. Freemelt is in a strong expansion phase with further employments and increased sales of the Freemelt ONE material research system as well as the development of the company's upcoming industrial 3D-printing system.

"It's about being able to offer the right products to the right markets and make sure that we meet customers' needs and expectations", says Ulric Ljungblad, Freemelt's CEO and continues:

"With Ulf and Per in their new positions, we take the commercial mindset with us throughout the development of existing and new products to enable competitive 3D-printers for the manufacturing industry."
