Many patients have escaped long queues thanks to CoreTherm® during the pandemic years.

Specialistläkargruppen i Kalmar, Sweden, announced yesterday that they performed 757 curative CoreTherm treatments during the pandemic years 2020-2021.

Dr Sonny Schelin, Specialistläkargruppen i Kalmar, writes: "The outpatient care at our clinic has worked very well despite the pandemic, with the clear advantage of being separated from the hospital's more difficult-to-control work environment, with many people at risk of infection. No patient has infected our staff and we have not infected any of our patients.

Our patients are just the tip of the iceberg of anyone who would need help. Those who have come to us are basically just patients who have actively demanded a referral to us or informed themselves and demanded help. A small part had waited a long time in the operating queue at the region's hospital, which then received an offer of help from us. 458 out of 757 have come from regions other than Region Kalmar County, which unfortunately testifies to how bad things are throughout Sweden in terms of prostate patients' ability to get help. However, we are very pleased that we have been able to be an oasis in the desert for these 757 gentlemen. "

ProstaLund's CEO, Johan Wennerholm comments: "It is absolutely fantastic that a small private urological clinic in the southeast corner of Sweden can produce so much care during the current pandemic, for the benefit of patients from all over the country, using our effective and relatively simple method, CoreTherm. Dr. Schelin's description of his activities in Kalmar shows very clearly that other regions have something to look after and, as soon as possible, start up similar centers to provide patients with benign prostate enlargement with adequate care in a timely manner."
