

Clavister and Saab Launch Cutting-edge Cross-Domain Solution

Örnsköldsvik, Sweden – 18 August 2025 – Clavister, a European leader in cybersecurity for mission-critical applications, today announces the launch of Clavister's and Saab's new innovative cross-domain solution, TactiGate XD. This advanced solution is the result of integrating Saab's TactiGuard capabilities with Clavister's CyberArmour military-grade AI-powered firewall, marking a significant milestone in the ongoing partnership.

TactiGate XD is a next-generation product designed for secure, real-time communication across multiple classified domains, including NATO Restricted and NATO Secret environments. This innovative solution uniquely enables integrated, policy-controlled communication across different security domains, handling simultaneous communication between multiple sub-systems with the smallest footprint available on the market. This capability is crucial for emerging battlefield concepts, such as dismounted soldiers requiring access to selected, mission-relevant classified information.

"We are excited to bring TactiGate XD to market and look forward to helping our customers achieve their security and operational goals," says Heino Lundgren, CEO of Saab Danmark A/S.

This launch builds upon the previously announced partnership between Clavister and Saab, the leading Nordic defence and security company. The collaboration aims to bolster Saab's existing cross-domain solutions with state-of-the-art firewalls, leveraging Clavister's more than 25 years of experience in delivering robust, European-made cybersecurity solutions.

"We are delighted to see the first tangible product resulting from the partnership between Saab and Clavister. We are convinced that TactiGate XD meets a critical operational need for secure, real-time information exchange across multiple classified domains, enabling defence forces to act with greater speed, confidence, and security," says John Vestberg, CEO of Clavister.
