

Newsec expands to London, strengthening Nordic-Baltic presence and global investment reach

Newsecs decision to establish a representation office in London marks a significant strategic expansion, reinforcing its position as a leading real estate advisor in the Nordic-Baltic region. This move comes five years after the pandemic and reflects the growing international interest from investors seeking opportunities in the Nordic and Baltic markets.

The new London office will serve as a key hub for connecting clients with global capital markets, attracting international investors, and providing deeper market insights. While not staffed full-time, the office will be operational several days a week to facilitate meetings and strengthen cross-border collaborations.

Max Barclay, CEO of Newsec, commented:

"By establishing a presence in London, we are strengthening our role as a bridge between the Nordic-Baltic real estate market and international investors, offering unique opportunities for growth and collaboration. The increasing global interest in our region makes this the right time to expand our footprint."
