Argo Defence Group awarded framework agreement with the Swedish Civil Defence and Resilience Agency (MCF) with a contract value of up to approximately SEK 13 million

Argo Defence Group AB (publ), through its wholly owned subsidiary Swedish Net Air & Defence AB, has been awarded a framework agreement by the Swedish Civil Defence and Resilience Agency (MCF) for heat lamps with accessories with a contract value of up to approximately SEK 13 million over a contract period of two years with an option to extend for a further two years. The agreement has not yet been entered into due to a ten-day standstill period.

The award decision concerns the procurement of heat lamps with accessories intended for warming individuals at risk of hypothermia in connection with traffic accidents, rescue operations, exposure to cold water, and other disaster and crisis situations.

"The award decision is welcome news and further strengthens our position as a supplier within defence and civil preparedness. The ability to rapidly provide warmth to individuals at risk of hypothermia is of great importance in both rescue operations and crisis situations, and we are proud to contribute to Sweden's civil preparedness," says Mariem Butler, CEO of Swedish Net Air & Defence.

In accordance with applicable legislation, a ten-day standstill period applies from the date on which the award decision was announced, during which the agreement may not be entered into. During the standstill period – and until the agreement is entered into – an application for judicial review of the procurement may be submitted to the competent administrative court. If such an application is submitted, an extended standstill period applies while the administrative court reviews the case, meaning that the agreement cannot be entered into until the proceedings have been concluded. Argo Defence Group will provide further information when available.
