

Mycronic receives order for an MMX metrology system

Mycronic AB (publ) has received an order for an MMX metrology system from a new customer in Asia. The order value is in the range of USD 2-4 million. Delivery of the system is planned for the current quarter.

The MMX is a system for measuring the position of the written pattern, thereby ensuring the quality of the produced photomask. The product is based on the SLX mask writer platform and Mycronic's existing Prexision-MMS metrology system for display photomasks. The MMX targets mature semiconductor nodes, enabling optimal flexibility for replacement of legacy systems and future volume growth.

"We are pleased to attract a new customer with MMX, our semiconductor metrology system. This product exemplifies how the synergies across our product lines enable reliable and highly productive solutions that meet our customers' demanding performance requirements", says Charlott Samuelsson, Sr VP Pattern Generators at Mycronic.

Mycronic's Pattern Generators division provides mask writers and metrology systems for display manufacturing and production of semiconductors.
