

BeammWave Adopts English as the Primary Language for Public Disclosures

BeammWave has decided to adopt English as the primary language for public disclosures.

The change takes effect immediately as of today, February 5, 2025. This means that the company will henceforth communicate all public information in English. However, certain information will still be published in Swedish in accordance with applicable regulations.

The decision to switch languages is based on the company's increasing international presence and the growing interest from global stakeholders, including customers and business partners.
