Stillfront unveils collaboration with Games Workshop. Announcing Supremacy Warhammer 40,000

Stillfront announces a collaboration with Games Workshop, through its studio Twin Harbour Interactive, by entering into a licensing agreement for the Warhammer 40,000 universe.

Stillfront's studio Twin Harbour Interactive (former Bytro and Dorado) announces that it is working with Games Workshop under license to develop a new title set in the world-renowned Warhammer 40,000 universe. This is the first IP-partnership for the Supremacy Franchise which marks a major milestone for Stillfront.

Alexis Bonte, President and Group CEO of Stillfront comments:

"We are incredibly proud to partner with Games Workshop and venture into the universe of Warhammer 40,000 with our Supremacy franchise. This collaboration is a testament to the strength of our strategy expertise at Twin Harbour Interactive and represents a pivotal moment for Stillfront as we integrate a legendary IP into our portfolio. We are dedicated to creating a deep and engaging grand strategy game that honors the rich lore of Warhammer 40,000 and provides a compelling experience for a massive audience."

Supremacy: Warhammer 40,000 introduces large-scale persistent multiplayer warfare to the Warhammer 40,000 universe through the lens of Twin Harbour's established expertise in long-term strategy. The game will launch on mobile and browser with pre-registration now open on Google Play and the App store.

Set on the war-torn planet Vigilus, Supremacy: Warhammer 40,000 offers players a high-stakes, long-term strategy experience where iconic factions clash for dominance. Designed in Unity, the game combines large-scale multiplayer warfare with faction-specific depth, immersing players in persistent battles that can span weeks.

Stillfront has two existing collaborations with Games Workshop through the games Warhammer 40,000: Warpforge and Warhammer: The Horus Heresy Legions.
