Castellum included in The Sustainability Yearbook for the tenth consecutive year

For the tenth year in a row, Castellum has been included in The Sustainability Yearbook, which highlights the world's leading companies in sustainability. In the category of Real Estate Management & Development, Castellum ranks first in Europe and 14th globally.

The Sustainability Yearbook annually presents the companies that place among the top 15 percent within their respective industries. In this year's edition, 9,200 companies across 59 industries were assessed, of which only 848 qualified. The purpose is to guide investors toward more sustainable and transparent investment options.

“Sustainability is an integrated part of our strategy and business model. Being included on the ranking for the tenth consecutive year, and being one of only three Swedish companies to receive the recognition this year, is a confirmation of our long-term and consistent sustainability efforts,” says Filip Elland, Chief Sustainability Officer at Castellum AB.

The Sustainability Yearbook is based on the S&P Global Corporate Sustainability Assessment (CSA), one of the world's most comprehensive sustainability assessments. The CSA analyzes more than 1,000 data points per company and assesses how well companies manage financially material ESG issues within areas such as corporate governance, climate strategy, social responsibility, and risk management. The result is compiled into industry-specific scores that determine which companies are recognized as sustainability leaders.
