Danish PLH joins XPartners – becomes the group's largest company

The engineering consultancy group XPartners continues its growth journey and now welcomes the Danish company PLH Architecture & Design. Through the acquisition, XPartners strengthens its offering within architecture, design, and sustainable urban development, while PLH gains access to a broader network and new opportunities to further develop both its services and its people.

PLH is one of Denmark's leading architectural firms, with a strong brand in the Nordic region and Europe. Founded in 1977, the company has shaped buildings and environments with sustainability, aesthetics and functionality at the core from the very beginning. Today, PLH has approximately 250 employees and offers full-suite architectural services across all phases of architecture and design projects – from early sketches and master planning to new construction and transformation of existing buildings. With this broad capability, PLH is a trusted partner to private, institutional and public clients alike.

“We are very proud that PLH has chosen to join XPartners. They share our belief that entrepreneurship, sustainability and collaboration are the foundation for future societal development. With their expertise, market position and strong culture, we are further strengthening our presence in the Danish market,” says Sonny Mirborn, CEO of XPartners.

PLH is backed by one of Denmark's largest creative and interdisciplinary team of specialists in architecture, interior design, landscape, user processes and sustainability. Through close and solution-oriented collaboration with their clients, they develop environments where people thrive, grow and perform – always with a focus on design, functionality and long-term value. In line with XPartners' business model, PLH will continue to operate under its own name, with the same leadership, team and culture as before.

“We are incredibly excited about this opportunity! By joining XPartners, we have the chance to grow further on our own terms – keeping our culture and identity intact, but with the strength of a larger platform behind us. We look forward to becoming part of the group and creating even greater value for our clients together,” says Søren Mølbak, CEO of PLH Architecture & Design.

The acquisition is subject to approval by local authorities and is expected to be finalized in the coming months.
