Norwegian Konsel joins XPartners

XPartners continues its growth in Norway and now welcomes Konsel AS, a recognized and specialized consultancy in design and planning of electrical engineering systems. The acquisition broadens XPartners' expertise in the Norwegian market and strengthens the group's position within private commercial real estate.

Konsel was founded in 2016 and is headquartered in Oslo. The company currently has 13 employees and specializes in the design of electrical installations in commercial construction projects. Their service offerings include the preparation of tender documents for electrical contracts, cost estimation, infrastructure assessment and planning, as well as detailed design.

"Konsel is a well-managed and specialized company with strong client relationships and high technical expertise. They have a driven team that has truly found an effective way of working within their niche of the market. The acquisition complements our existing operations in Norway and strengthens our offering in electrical engineering – an area seeing increasing demand as building systems become more complex. We're very pleased to welcome them to the network," says Sonny Mirborn, CEO of XPartners.

The company works closely with small and medium-sized electrical contractors, developers, and general contractors, and has a significant share of recurring assignments. The organization consists of experienced designers and project managers with backgrounds from larger organizations, providing the company with a dynamic appreciated by clients.

"Joining XPartners is a natural step in our development. We look forward to contributing our specialist expertise while also growing together with the many talented companies in the network. We especially value the combination of continuing to run our business in the same focused way as before, while also becoming part of something bigger. It feels both exciting and like the right move," says Mats Graff-Wang, CEO of Konsel AS.
