

Gapwaves receives an order from a new American autotech company

Gapwaves has received the first order from a new American autotech company. The ordered project consists of design and manufacturing of high-resolution radar antenna prototypes for imaging radar, intended for autonomous vehicles. The total order value is approximately MSEK 2.8 with expected delivery during Q4 2022.

Gapwaves CEO Lars-Inge Sjöqvist comments:

“We are very excited about this order and that we can add one more American autotech company to our customer list. Over the past year, we have seen an increased interest from global tech companies alongside the traditional suppliers to the automotive industry. This new customer is a provider of self-driving vehicles, and we have high expectations on this collaboration”.
