

Norwegian company Bygghuset joins XPartners

XPartners is strengthening its position in Norway and welcomes Bygghuset to the group. The company adds qualified expertise within project administration and project management in the construction sector and expands the group's experience within residential projects.

Bygghuset was founded in 2009 and is headquartered in Nordre Follo located just outside of Oslo. The company has around ten employees and offers a broad range of services within project management, contract administration, construction management, quality assurance and coordination of safety, health and environment. Its operations focus on private construction projects and are conducted primarily in Greater Oslo and the Østlandet region. In the most recent financial year, the company generated revenues of approximately 20 million Norwegian kroner.

"We are very pleased to welcome Bygghuset to XPartners. The company is well established in the Norwegian construction sector and adds strong competence within project administration and project management. This strengthens our offering in an important market and creates solid opportunities for collaboration with other companies in the group," says Christian Nørgaard Madsen, Managing Director at XPartners Norway.

The customer base consists of actors within private residential and commercial construction projects in regions with strong development, which provides healthy demand and potential for deeper collaboration.

"We have built Bygghuset through long term relationships and strong presence out on the projects. As part of XPartners, we can continue working closely with our clients while offering them broader expertise and new collaboration opportunities within the group. We see this as a natural and exciting next step in our development," says Steinar Kvistad, CEO of Bygghuset.
