JUMPGATE ANNOUNCES DLC PLAN FOR STAR TREK: VOYAGER – ACROSS THE UNKNOWN

Jumpgate studio gameXcite and the publisher Daedalic Entertainment have agreed on the development of four additional downloadable content releases (“DLC”) for Star Trek: Voyager - Across the Unknown to be released in 2026, adding more stories, characters, technologies and space ships as well as a new game mode with more details to be revealed at a later date. The DLC development costs will be co-funded by Daedalic and supported by external project funding with Jumpgate retaining a significant revenue share from day one of release. Additionally, there will be a series of free updates including a new game mode, starting with the Delta Flyer update. More information to follow in due course.

“Star Trek: Voyager – Across the Unknown is the most successful release from gameXcite and Jumpgate so far and we are pleased to announce that four DLCs are in the works, providing additional content for the players. This is expected to enhance the game play, support the longevity of the game and add significant revenue streams to the game already in 2026. ”, says Harald Riegler, CEO Jumpgate.
