

The board of directors has decided to redo the proposal for incentive program

The board of directors in QleanAir has decided to redo the proposal for incentive program for the management and key employees.

As a consequence of the Corona pandemic and the following high volatility in the company's share price the board has decided not to execute on the decided incentive program. Instead, the Board intends to submit a proposal to an Extraordinary General Meeting on a new incentive program that takes into account the prevailing circumstances. The Board will shortly send out notice for an Extra General Meeting for shareholders to be able to make a new decision.
