

Flat makes an angel investment of 2.6 MSEK in Brindlechute

Flat Capital AB (publ) ("Flat") has made an angel investment of approx. 2.6 MSEK in Brindlechute, a US-based company that has developed an operating system for booking, payment and communication, targeting the tourism and travel industry. The investment is made alongside other prominent entrepreneurs and angel investors.

Brindlechute was founded in the end of 2024 by CEO Connor Lanman and CTO Geoff Liu. The investment was made possible through the board's contact with serial entrepreneur and investor Fritz Lanman, who has invested in the company and is a member of its board.

About Flat Capital:

Flat Capital is an investment company that focuses on growth stage companies with prominent entrepreneurs in leading positions and primarily makes investments through its network of world-class investors and entrepreneurs. The company was founded in 2013 by entrepreneurs Nina and Sebastian Siemiatkowski (founders and CEOs of Milkywire and Klarna, respectively) and is led by CEO Hanna Andreen together with an experienced board of directors. Examples of portfolio companies include OpenAI, Klarna, Perplexity, SpaceX and Figma. The company aims to provide long-term capital and is essentially a passive minority shareholder, while Flat Capital's experience and network are available to the extent the entrepreneur wishes. The aim is to facilitate successful company building and enable exposure to otherwise hard-to-reach and promising companies. More information is available at www.flatcapital.com
