4C Strategies launches climate resilience software to help organizations tackle the challenges of climate change

4C Strategies, the leading provider of organizational resilience and training readiness software has released an end-to-end platform to help organizations manage their environmental impact and climate vulnerabilities, and tackle the challenges of climate change. The end-to-end platform, which is available in three stepwise solutions – Mitigate, Adapt and Accelerate – is designed to scale with an organization’s needs.

User-friendly climate resilience solution

According to Josh Rice, Climate Resilience Expert at 4C Strategies, “Many businesses are impacted by climate change and extreme weather conditions, whether it’s disruptions to the supply chain or energy supply, damage to property, or water scarcity. New regulatory requirements will also see many thousands of companies in the EU, for instance, mandated to report and disclose their environmental impacts and emissions by January 1st 2025. Meaning they, amongst others, will have to monitor emissions from January 1st 2024.”

“At 4C we have developed a user-friendly solution that enables organizations, regardless of size or industry, to mitigate and report their impacts, adapt operations to respond to climate-related events and crises, take advantage of new business opportunities, and accelerate their journey to net-zero.”

Proven software offers a standards-based approach

Exonaut Climate Resilience utilizes proven resilience software tools and capabilities to provide users with in-depth insights into their climate risks, opportunities and vulnerabilities, while enabling them to create targeted plans to reduce emissions and mitigate their environmental impact. Automated processes and workflows that adhere to ISO 14001 enable organizations to streamline operations and take a standards-based approach to climate resilience.

End-to-end platform for today and the future

“This is the next logical step for our company,” says 4C CEO Magnus Bergqvist. “As a leading provider of resilience software and services, our solutions are used by organizations across the world to build resilience and manage risks and crises – from cyberattacks to supply chain issues and the loss of key personnel. We have transferred our expertise and knowhow from this area into our climate resilience solutions. And the timing couldn’t be more apt. Risks and crises linked to climate change are becoming a reality for many large organizations, therefore preparing for such events is as important as working with cybersecurity.”

Launch at Responsible Business Europe 2023

Exonaut Climate Resilience will be premiered at Responsible Business Europe 2023 in London, June 6-7. More can be read about the solution and how it can help organizations here <https://www.4cstrategies.com/climate>
