

Acarix Awarded Business Sweden 2023 Catalyst Program Award

Acarix, a leader in acoustic and AI-based cardiac diagnostics, is pleased to announce they have been awarded the 2023 Catalyst Program Award in the Life Sciences Sector by Business Sweden. The Catalyst program is designed to support and accelerate the growth of Sweden's most innovative and promising companies by providing tailored commercialization support, advice, and coaching in a chosen market.

Acarix was selected for the award after undergoing a rigorous selection process that assessed its business model, technology, and potential for international growth. As a winner of the Catalyst program, Acarix will receive a tailored market entry project worth SEK 250,000 to support and accelerate its growth journey.

"We are honored to be recognized by Business Sweden for our innovation and potential for growth," said Helen Ljungdahl Round, President & CEO of Acarix. "This award is a testament to our team's hard work and dedication, and we look forward to utilizing the resources and support provided by the program to expand our reach and impact with CADScor System."

Chest pain is one of the most common reasons patients seek medical care, and they deserve to know immediately if their chest pain is related to heart disease or not. Acarix's flagship product, the CADScor System, rapidly and accurately rules out significant coronary artery disease early in the diagnostic pathway, providing physicians with a non-invasive, first-line diagnostic aid for risk stratification at point-of-care for all patients experiencing stable chest pain.

"We are excited to work with Acarix and help them achieve their international growth ambitions," says Jonas Thulin, Program Manager Life Science at Business Sweden. "Their innovative technology has the potential to transform how patients with stable chest pain are diagnosed. This shows the capability of Business Sweden's internationalization programs for scale-ups. We are ready to support Acarix in many markets."
