The CEO's comments

The development of Nanexa continues. In the second quarter, we secured funding that will allow us to pursue our projects until valuable milestones are reached. The fact that we are now in the clinical development phase with PharmaShell is the first important step on that journey and, thanks to the funding, we can now accelerate our activities.

Our first clinical trial with PharmaShell started on schedule before the summer according to plan. It is a phase I study in two doses to study pharmacokinetics, safety and tolerability for NEX-18. The start of the study was a major milestone for us. With the PharmaShell platform, we can create controlled-release depot preparations that could revolutionise pharmaceutical treatment. By using NEX-18 to administer only one injection, instead of the current seven, the treatment of myelodysplastic syndrome (MDS) would be significantly simplified and significant cost savings would be achieved.

The exceptional situation for our hospitals created by the pandemic continues to have a greater impact than we expected, and as clinics get up and running after the summer, we see that patient enrolment in the study is slower than we had anticipated. To increase the pace of enrolment, we have added another clinic to the study and we are working hard to be able to complete the study as soon as possible. However, our long-term plans are not affected.

Although NEX-18 is still at an early stage, we have already seen interest from a number of pharmaceutical companies. With the study results, we intend to continue clinical development with a phase II study to reach clinical Proof of Concept. Given good study results, the goal is to license NEX-18 to a strong partner or to take the project further towards commercialisation in-house, depending on what is deemed to create the most value. We are also seeing a lot of interest as we build international expert teams for our projects.

During the second quarter, progress was made in the evaluation collaboration signed with a European biotech company in the first quarter of this year. The company is conducting a development project including PharmaShell® in the cardiovascular field. The evaluation has been going well and has now moved into animal studies. Future results may form the basis for a deeper and longer product development agreement.

We look forward to meeting new potential partners at upcoming partnering conferences this autumn, including plans to participate in Partnership Opportunities in Drug Delivery (PODD) in Boston in October. Historically, these types of conferences have led to new partnerships for us, and as the world slowly opens up, so do our opportunities to make important new contacts.

Our collaboration with Applied Materials progressed well during the quarter. We look forward to the installation of production equipment from Applied Materials in our GMP-certified pilot plant. The facility is important for both our own projects and for our partner projects, as it will streamline our development and create opportunities for scaling up.

I am proud of the skills Nanexa is able to attract. During the quarter, the board was further strengthened with Eva Nilsagård and Birgit Stattin Norinder. Eva Nilsagård has over 30 years of experience in senior positions, mainly in the automotive and medical/biotech industries, and Birgit Stattin Norinder has extensive experience from senior management positions in international pharmaceutical and biotech companies, which has, among other things, resulted in a number of new and approved medicines. I would like to welcome both Eva and Birgit to Nanexa.

During the quarter, we secured financing through a fully underwritten rights issue of approximately SEK 127 million before transaction costs. I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the confidence placed in us in connection with the issue, both by old and new owners. The strong ownership support is appreciated by us at the company and it enables us to drive our projects towards value-adding milestones.

I am looking forward to the future with great confidence. We will receive results from our first clinical study, obtain important preclinical results from our second project, NEX-20, and determine the indication for our third project, NEX-21. We also expect further development of the collaborations that we have with existing and new partner companies for licensing out the technology, and not least progress in our collaboration with Applied Materials. We have an exciting time ahead of us and I look forward to keeping you updated on Nanexa's continued development.
