Flat 'angel' invests 0.6 MSEK in the AI-orchestration platform Nexos.ai

Flat Capital AB (publ) (“Flat”) has invested approx. 0.6 MSEK in the AI-orchestration platform Nexos.ai (“Nexos.ai” or the “Company”) in their recently announced capital round. Other investors include Index Ventures and Creandum.

Lithuania-based Nexos.ai was launched in January 2025 by founders Tomas Okmanas and Eimantas Sabaliauskas, who have previously built successful companies such as Nord Security and Oxyllabs. Nexos.ai serves as an enterprise AI orchestration platform, functioning as an operating system that enables the integration, optimization, and monitoring of over 200 AI models from vendors such as OpenAI, Anthropic, Google, and Meta through a unified interface. The platform centralizes AI models and offers advanced features such as smart routing and caching, streamlining the managing of complex AI ecosystems and optimizing performance and costs.

About Flat Capital:

Flat Capital is an investment company that focuses on growth stage companies with prominent entrepreneurs in leading positions and primarily makes investments through its network of world-class investors and entrepreneurs. The company was founded in 2013 by entrepreneurs Nina and Sebastian Siemiatkowski (founders and CEOs of Milkywire and Klarna, respectively) and is led by CEO Hanna Andreen together with an experienced board of directors. Examples of portfolio companies include OpenAI, Klarna, Perplexity, SpaceX and Figma. The company aims to provide long-term capital and is essentially a passive minority shareholder, while Flat Capital’s experience and network are available to the extent the entrepreneur wishes. The aim is to facilitate successful company building and enable exposure to otherwise hard-to-reach and promising companies. More information is available at www.flatcapital.com
