Chordate Medical begins market introduction of migraine treatment in the UK

Chordate Medical ("Chordate", "the company") has entered into an agreement with Futures.Health LTD, UK to introduce the company's product for preventive migraine treatment on the UK market. The agreement is initially signed for one year and has been preceded by a detailed market analysis to determine the best approach - carried out by Futures.Health.

The agreement means that Futures.Health on behalf of Chordate will introduce the K.O.S treatment to opinion-leading neurologists in the UK, primarily in the private health sector, and spread knowledge about K.O.S and the company. The agreement also includes that Futures.Health will organize marketing activities and bring about sales at an early stage. At the same time, Chordate terminates the agreement with the company's former distributor in the UK.

According to the NHS, around 10 million people aged 15-69 suffer from migraines in the UK. In total, the NHS estimates that it spends around £ 150 million a year on treating migraines and £ 250 million on the care of headache patients. The cost to the national economy is around £ 4.4 billion a year lost to three million migraine-related sick days.

"After an in-depth analysis of the market that has been ongoing since last summer, it's positive that we have now started the project. We have a lot of work ahead of us, but based on the market access analysis, I have full confidence in the expertise of Futures.Health. To introduce a specialist care product to a new market requires focused individual competence in the healthcare market's structure, academia, compensation issues and marketing, and Futures.Health have just that", says Anders Weilandt, CEO of Chordate.
