Chordate to conduct interim analysis on ongoing multicenter clinical study of intranasal kinetic oscillation stimulation for preventive treatment of chronic migraine

Interim results anticipated Q2 2019

Kista, Sweden, February 22, 2019 — Chordate Medical Holding AB's (publ) ("Chordate"), a specialty medtech company that focuses on developing and commercializing neuromodulating treatment systems for treating non-allergic rhinitis and chronic migraine, today announced the decision to conduct an interim analysis of the ongoing clinical study with Chordate's investigative product Kinetic Oscillation Stimulation System S211 (K.O.S-treatment). The multicenter study conducted in Germany enrolls patients with diagnosed chronic migraine (≥15 days/month of headache, whereof >8 days with migraine).

"We have come to the point in the development of this study where it makes sense to - by common praxis - verify the validity of the underlying statistical calculations of needed study population, and to determine probability of its outcome. Chronic headache problems concern many patients around the world. We are continuing to explore what we believe can offer a great potential for remedy with our proprietary non-pharmaceutical preventive treatment method", said Anders Weilandt, CEO of Chordate.

The randomized, placebo-controlled, double-blind, multicenter study is being conducted at four neurology clinics in Germany. The study intends to enroll up to 140 subjects and is designed to evaluate the efficacy and safety of the K.O.S-treatment, with the primary endpoint to detect mean change from baseline (4-week screening period) in monthly headache days with moderate to severe intensity, in a 4-week performance assessment period. The fifty percent of the patients in the K.O.S arm are receiving active treatment from the S211, while the other half of the patients are receiving a validated sham/placebo treatment from the same equipment.
