Dutch brand Tricorp and Polygiene launch workwear that will go the distance

Tricorp, the leading workwear brand in the Netherlands is launching t-shirts and polos with Polygiene Biostatic™ Stays Fresh technology for their new collection RE2050, a serie of articles, in which pre- and post-consumer waste is used.

The use of Polygiene® technologies means that garments will stay fresh for longer periods of time and will last longer due to the reduced need for washing, all in line with the Polygiene vision to change the way we view products - from fast consumables to durables

Tricorp has a goal for 100% circular workwear, an example of that is their recycling program where used workwear is collected for use in new textile products. Additionally, as member of Fair Wear Foundation, they aim to improve working conditions in the clothing industry.

The company states: “At Tricorp, our goal is to be progressive, innovative and at the forefront of the workwear market while providing the best fitting workwear in a sustainable and safe manner. That is at the same time one of the reasons that Polygiene and Tricorp are such a good fit. With the technologies of Polygiene we are able to give our workwear an extra dimension: Less smell and a longer lifetime of the product.”

About Tricorp

Tricorp, is a single team of more than 70 employees. They work with others and work together to design and produce the best workwear for every professional, which is the very reason they are in business. Tricorp was founded in 1998 with the aim to supply professionals with workwear that would help them get the most out of each working day. Tricorp supplies workwear for every professional: not just workwear for men and women, but workwear for professionals in the most diverse fields. They believe that professionals are entitled to demand more from their workwear. It must fit perfectly. Professionals come in all shapes and sizes, but that is not a problem, since all efforts are focused on developing collections of uniform workwear that are available in various sizes and fits. Workwear must be suitable for the work of the professional, so they offer a single collection of workwear that will suit each individual no matter which shape or size.
