

HANZA opens new production facility in Narva

HANZA held an opening ceremony for the new production facility in Narva, Estonia. The building has a production area of 5,000 square meters, which allows us to offer complete production solutions to our customers.

The new production facility is part of HANZA Mechanics Narva, located on the territory of Narva Industrial Park, and the investments made in machinery and technology are a direct response to the increased demand from the company's customers.

The site will focus on final assembly production, specializing in heavier constructions, and one of the first projects to be assembled in the facilities will be forklifts for Mitsubishi Logisnext Europe ("MLE"), a large contract that we announced earlier this year.

"We are very excited to open this new factory, it is an important step for HANZA and also for the people working here in Narva. Now we will be able to offer our customers a complete production solution thanks to this assembly department. And this is what HANZA's "All you need is one" concept is all about, from metal components to final assembly," says Liivar Kongi, Cluster President Baltics.
