

New office in Stockholm will strengthen Resurs's position in e-commerce

Resurs Bank has opened the doors to a new office in Stockholm with space for 30 to 40 employees. An office in one of Europe's largest fintech centres allows Resurs to add valuable expertise and partners that can strengthen Resurs as a tech-oriented, commercially driven player in the Nordic market.

In addition to its head office in Helsingborg, Resurs Bank has offices in Malmö and Borås as well as in the Nordic capital cities of Oslo, Helsinki and Copenhagen. Sweden is Resurs's home market and as a part of the bank's ongoing transformation journey, Resurs has now opened an office in the Swedish capital.

"Resurs is in the middle of an exciting transformation journey, with a primary focus on strengthening its position in e-commerce and its commercial offerings in the Nordic market. This requires a high level of expertise, so we need to be in Stockholm, a European fintech hub. We'll also be closer to customers and attractive partners, which is very valuable," says Nils Carlsson, CEO, Resurs Bank.

Resurs's modern Stockholm offices are a part of the innovation and tech hub The Factory, which brings together startups, companies and organisations under the same roof.

"We'll be part of an exciting and innovative environment, which will support our transformation journey. We're moving towards becoming a more tech-oriented company and strengthening our position, primarily in e-commerce, to create better conditions for increased growth," says Nils Carlsson.

Resurs has already recruited several individuals for the Stockholm office. Open jobs can be found here: <https://www.resursjobs.com/open-jobs>
